Commodity money / credit money

Money has a dual nature: the first Currency-Merchandise relates to the functions it is able to exercise - as a medium of exchange, unit of account, means of payment, the other, Currency-Credit has to do with the reserve of despotic value and power, manifested in the social relations that come to be determined within its production and distribution process.

In the theory of commodity money "it operates within a model of the" real "economy based essentially on barter, in which money is the mere symbol of the underlying real exchange relations" [p.65]. It is said that money is a "neutral veil" spread over the mechanisms of the "real" economy, not a sui generis economic force. In the last period the current economic system has lost its center in the person moving the currency towards its despotic accent, moving it away from being a simple neutral veil at the service of economic and social relations. First the states and then the banks have centralized their despotic power through its production and distribution but the currency was not born in a bank or in a state the currency was born to support exchanges between people and communities.

This is why the currency in our system is nothing more than an expression of the parties' willingness to exchange goods and services using a unit of their own account, in which the debt to the system is a permanent credit of each associated actor, thus resulting, owned by every single actor for its share of credit obtained.

The only way to see your credit renewed and available is to sell or lend your services within the circuit. As explained in the regulation and in the same way as the procedure for cleaning up non-performing loans in the banking sector, the perennial debt is understood to be waived by the circuit at the end of the 2 years of inactivity without claiming to be associated with the circuit.

The ultimate purpose of the system adopted by the DINDICASH community is to reconcile this rift between the two fundamental monetary theories in the economic field: that of the commodity-money and the nominalist of the money-credit.

Coin-Velo

Our Fundamental Ethics is that money, is man, born of man and must return to it, in a more neutral and less despotic way, this is now possible, thanks to the blockchain, in which we guarantee inviolability and distributed trust . Thanks also to various integrated marketing tools, the Dindicash system differs from the current debt-based economic system, creating an environment in which everything is more accessible to all, guaranteeing credit to all the associates, asking for the provision of goods and services in exchange for companies or a small job like reading a simple notification, for private users. Realizing the conditions for what some define: UBI = Universal Basic Income, Universal Basic Income guaranteed by the receipt and sharing of advertising content.
